Hello!

Preparedness doesn't have to be hard, but sometimes it feels overwhelming. Here at Are You Prepared, Mama?, we simplify the process of preparedness. This Prepper's Printable Binder is designed to do just that. Read through the instructions. Fill in the information. Gather the necessary documents. You will be more prepared today than you were yesterday - and isn't that what preparedness is all about?

You've got this, Mama!

About the Process

In this printable binder, you will organize three types of information. First, you will fill in information from different locations and collate these in this binder. This information includes family, utility, insurance, and bank information. The second type of information is planning and checklists.

How do you determine what to pack in your bug-out bag or in your vehicle or for your EDC? These worksheets will help you. The last type of information is a copy of important documents. These will include everything from family, financial, property, insurance, legal documents, and important warranties.

Emergency Services

The police have two types of phone numbers. The first is for emergencies: break-ins, medical emergencies, fires, domestic violence, car accidents with injuries, and others. Of course, we all know that number is ...

911

The second is a non-emergency number. There are many different reasons you might call this number. There's that neighbor who is blaring loud music at 2:00 am. There's a person down the street who is publicly acting as if they are on meth, and you're concerned that they are cooking it in your neighborhood. You find personal property vandalism that occurred while you were away. There's been a theft. You need to report a crime that has already occurred.

Find the non-emergency number for your local police organization and your local precinct's direct number and list it here.
